CHAPTER - IV

TAHASIL ADMINISTRATION AND SOCIAL CHANGE

4.1. SOCIAL CHANGE

"The nature is never at rest. It is changeful-change is ever present in the world, because change is the law of nature. Similarly society is not at all a static phenomenon but it is a dynamic entity. It is "on going process". Society is subject to constant changes. Social change has occurred in societies and at alltimes. Every society and culture, no matter how traditional and conservative, is constantly undergoing change. Society changes in ceaseless flux and flow".[1]

Engle's view rings that "Nothing remains what, where, and as it was, but everything moves, changes, comes into being and passes away".

"Incessant changeability is the very inherent nature of human society. Individuals may strikes for security and stability ; Society may foster an illusion of permanence and belief in maternity may present unshaken. Society is influenced by many forces and factors that irresistibly cause changes."[2]

Social change is a term which is used to indicate the changes which take place in human interactions and interrelations. So social change denotes the meaning that change in the system of social relationship by social process and social interactions are understood.

MacIver remarks that "social change refers to 'a process' responsive to many types of changes; to changes in the man made conditions of life ; to changes in the attitude and belief of man, and to the changes to go beyond the human control to the biological and the physical mature of the things".

H.M. Johnson observes that "broadly speaking, social change is either change in the structural or quasi structural aspects of a system or change in the relative importance of Coexisting structural pattern".

Nature of Social Change

Social change is peculiar in nature. It is universal and is a process involves the idea of continuity. It is temporal as is a becoming, not a being, a process and not a product. Social change also refers to community change as it encompasses the entire community as such it is social, not individual. It is also observed that social changes refers to modifications or replacement. Thus social change is inevitable as human -needs- are many which always keep on changing. Social change has both qualitative and quantitative aspect which the whole Community feels the effect of change in these terms.

Society is the smallest state and state is the biggest society. Changes in the society brings changes in the state. State is the political institution social changes here reflects the political changes. Society breeds changes in political behavior-more probably in legislation and administration. As according to the social change subjects and legislated and administration is carried on. That legislation must take place within a geographic or physical and cultural context by which economic conditions are fulfilled and administration is carried on . So it is observed that social change reflects administration general and revenue .

4.2. SOCIO-CULTURAL ASPECTS

Cultural change has a great sociological importance cultural change and social change are inter connected . Social change may be meant to alternation in social organisation where as cultural change embraces all changes occurring in any branch of culture.

According to kingsley Davis " Cultural change broader than social change, and social change is only part of it".

"All social changes are cultural changes, but all cultural changes need not necessarily be the social changes also. Cultural changes can be called social changes only when they affect human relations and the social organisation and cause some variation in them. Ex-changes in the musical styles, painting styles rules of writing poetry and drama, pronunciation of words etc. represents cultural changes. They can not be called social changes because they do not in any way affect the existing pattern of human interaction, social system and social organisation".[3]

Social changes may cause the alteration in the relation of employer and employee, rulers and ruled which bring changes in method of administration, legislation, economic policies and programmes and so on.

Cultural change is thus broader than social change. Some part of culture are related to social order as these do not affect the social system. But these have an effect on social organisation.

Administration is a part of political system. Political and social conditions are interrelated. The social standard is valued by the nature of politics where administration is a part of it. Revenue administration or Tahasil Administration is the compartmentalisation of general administration. Politics of a particular territory may be described as a measuring rod of social situation. In a developed society, politics is more conscious and modernized. Administration as a part of political system is reflected by the social change and culture.

"A political culture is composed of the attitude, beliefs, emotions and values of society that relates to the political that relates to the political system and political issues".[4]

"Certain aspects of general culture, of a society are especially concerned with how Government aught to be conducted and what it shall try to do. This sector of culture we call political culture". [5]

As has been pointed out before revenue administration as a part of general administration has certain role in socio-cultural activities.

The Socio Cultural activities in General Administration vis-a-vis in Tahasil Administration is the gate-way towards development administration. The idea of development administration as directly government led effort to intervene in the process of Socio-economic transformation.

Development administration need not be equated with administrative development or growth. It is by now widely acknowledged that development is public administration with a difference. It's focus is on government influenced change towards the attainment of progressive Social-economic and political objectives.

Edward widener opines that "development administration is an action-oriented, goaloriented administrative system".[6]

Structuraly, development administration is concerned with the organisation of new agencies for development such as a planning commission or a development authority or corporation. It involves refashioning of established agencies such as the department of irrigation and agriculture. Administrative development refers to the evolving capacity of an administrative system. It is the Central task of administration to mobilies resources, use these efficiently and produce desired results through organised efforts under policy direction Coming from Institutional or political system. Development administration incorporates increase in size and budgetary allocation, increasing diversification and specialization and professionalisation of administrative Personnel. Efficiency and effectiveness of Government everywhere is sought to be enhanced by planned administrative development in respect to changing social demands. Thus, it also needs administrative development to suit the needs of development.

As has been discussed before in social change and culture the traditional society is continually in the throes of change. The prismatic society is trapped like a light inside the prison.

Modernity and tradition Coexist in uneasy companionship. Modern structures and procedures might have been formally introduced, but behind the facade of theses new structures the old and traditional way of doing things persist in reality.

Tahasil administration as a part of general administration through different projects and programmes helps towards development administration.

The objectives of this campaign are (a) to protect and ensure the land rights of the poor, who were allotted lease of Government lands earlier or restored their lost land (b) to achieve Convergence with developmental schemes to see that the land allots are in better position to utilise the land and (c) to assist the poor, with emphasis on those belonging to ST and SC Communities, to retain their land and homestead within the existing legal framework.

Mission Bhoomi

Mission Bhoomi Project was launched for strengthening of land administration in Odisha which is comprehensive proposal for modernising and reforming the Land Administration System. The proposal is aimed at strengthening the Land administration through the introduction of comprehensive reforms of land ensure including tilting, cadastral survey and settlement operations using hi-tech technology, land registration transactions through modern technology and streamline the Revenue Laws.

Issue of Land Pass Book

The matter regarding issue of Land Pass Book to each individual landholding family of state and to enable the members of such families to use the land pass book as an authoritatively document in lieu of various certificates issued by he Government departments, local bodies and other institutions of Government was under active consideration of Government for some time past. The Government, after careful consideration of the matter, have decided to issue land pass books to all the individual land - holding families of the state.

Bhoodan

Bhoodan movement was initiated by Acharya Vinoba Bhave on 18.04.1951 with the objective of minimizing the difference between the haves and have-nots. Since then land was received by way of donation from benevolent land owners and the same were distributed among the land less persons under Bhoodan Act, 1953 and Rule 1954 which was replaced by Bhoodan Act, 1970 and Rules, 1972.

Out of total area of Ac. 6, 38, 706, 50 dec. of Bhoodan land received by way of donation, Ac. 5, 79, 984, 21 dec of land have been distributed among 1,52,852 landless person and Ac. 58, 722,29 dec. Bhoodan land is yet to be distributed. Step are being taken for quick distribution of balance Bhoodan land among the landless person.

Ceiling Surplus Land

The distribution of ceiling surplus land has been started with effect from 26.09.1970. It has been decided that 70% of ceiling surplus land vested in government would be settled with persons belonging to ST and SC Categories in proportion to their respective population in the village. The remaining land would be settled with other categories of landless persons. In all cases upto maximum of Ac.0.7 standard acre of agriculture land is being distributed on Rayati basis free of Salami.

Government of India have fixed target for the state for distribution of ceiling surplus land to the landless people which has been included as point No.5 (a) under 20 point programme of our state has achieved. The target fixed by Government of India as shown below during the last five years beginning from the year 2001-02, 2005-06.

Bench Mark Valuation

Under Section 47 - A of the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, Registering Officer an initiate action on instruments on which proper valuation of the property has not been reflected. He should register the Instrument, but refer the matter to the Collector for determination of market value of the property and the value of Stamp duty payable for the same. This is popularly called under valuation case.
